What types of institutions can obtain the “Bienvenue en France” label?

To apply for the “Bienvenue en France” label, an institution must:

- be a French institution of higher education
- offer programs regulated by the French government or by recognized accrediting organizations
- provide services to support international students.

The Bienvenue en France Labeling Commission—made up of members of three conferences of academic institutions (FU, CDEFI, CGE), in addition to CTI, HCERES, and Campus France<sup>1</sup>—evaluates applications for the label from French institutions of higher education. The commission is empowered to award the label for a period of four years. One to three stars may appear on the label, reflecting the quality of services offered.

1. France Universités (FU); CDEFI = conference of directors of French schools of engineering; CGE = conference of the Grandes Écoles; CTI = commission on engineering degrees; HCERES = high council for the evaluation of research and higher education.

What is the “Bienvenue en France” label?

Let’s say you are an international student and would like to study in France.

The Bienvenue en France label helps you identify institutions offering services that will facilitate your study plans and your career development—before, during, and after your stay in France.

→ For the list of the institutions that have earned the label, visit www.campusfrance.org/en/bienvenue-en-france-certification-institutions-certified
